

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

INTRODUCTION.

"In the whole world there is no study so beneficial and "so elevating as that of the Upanishads. It has been the "solace of my life, it will be the solace of my death." These words of the German sage were cheerfully endorsed, only last year, by a living scholar and thinker of considerable repute and authority. The Philosophy of the Upanishads scarcely needs recommendation. Philosophers from Plato to Schopenhauer are unanimous in their testimony to the elevating, alleviating, influence of the Vedânta. An Age of Positive Science alone requires to be put in mind of these expressions.

It has been the ambition of my heart, from the first-hand experience I have had of the truth of these remarks, to present the main Idea of this sublime universal 'Philosophy of the Absolute' in as simple and popular a form as the nature of the subject would permit. The deservedly popular book of Thomas-a-Kempis, 'The Imitation of Christ,' fascinated my attention, and Bowdon's 'Imitation of Buddha' suggested the plan of this work. There was the same mighty spirit breathing in the child of Galilee, the prince of Kapilavastu, and this Brâhmana of Southern India. He has as much right to an 'Imitation' as the other seers of autiquity; the need for an 'Imitation of S'ankara' is perhaps greatest in the present day.

I am not unconscious of the defects of my performance. It lacs the simplicity of Kempis. The nature of the subject is my only excuse; and if the book gives plain, serious, earnest, matter for thought, at first sight, I should consider it no small satisfaction. Then again the detached nature of the information is another difficulty in the way. Loss of context might occasionally tend to obscure the sense of a passage. I have, however, tried to remedy this defect by stringing the pieces together in a kind of fictitious context from end to end. Many of the passages could have been given in much better language, for, several of them have been translated before by abler hands; but I have my reasons for attempting fresh Where commentaries have been available, I have carefully consulted them, and, by giving a free rendering of every text, I have done my best to combine the spirit of the context and the strength of the commentary in my translation. Among commentaries those of S'ankara have always had the preference. In one more respect does this work differ from that of Kempis or rather that of Bowdon. The collection here is not entirely from the works of S'ankara, but from all works bearing on the Philosophy taught by S'ankara and his followers. I have divided the whole collection into sections and sub-sections with a view to exhaust the main topics of the Absolute Philosophy. Texts from the Upanishads and other works are often referred to in Vedanta-writings. That almost every important reference of this kind may easily be traced to its place in this collection, where it should be found in its entirety with translation, a careful Alphabetical Index has been appended at the end. Another Index puts together the principal points of this Philosophy, and directs even the most casual render to whatever information this book can give on the question and its bearings. Words not Englished in the text have been collected together for explanation in an Index. to which the reader may conveniently refer.

With the chapter of genesis thus finished, we may take closer view of the child that sees the light. Many a reader would, however, be curious to hear something of the god-father of this infant. A few words can satisfy the curiosity, for, it is matter of secondary consequence in a work of this kind to concern ourselves with the yet disputed question of the history of S'ankara. We are here concerned with the mighty spirit underlying the shell bearing that name, with the awakening, enchanting music of the harmony through which It relates itself to posterity and time. It is not certain when S'ankara lived : some place him after, some before Christ. He was a Brahmana, native of some obscure town on the coast of Malabar. He is reported to be an incarnation of god S'iva. He found the Light while yet eight years of age, and, with the permission of his fond mother, he renounced the world and became a Sannyasin. Through Renunciation he transferred the sphere of his activity from the narrow limits of his simple homestead to the wide expanse of interesting humanity and the world. He solved the national problem of the day through his Philosophy which exercised a powerful, potent charm over the mind of India. victorious termination of his universal philosophic war made him the one Achdrya, the one master-philosopher of the land. He founded four mighty 'seats of learning (Mathas)' in the four corners of India. These are extant to the present day. The body which encaged this mighty spirit was dissolved at the early age of thirty-two.

^{*} For instance, just turn to para 94. Prof. Max Müller renders it thus at page 137 of his 'Three Lectures on the Vedânta:' "This is the light of lights, when it shines the sun does not shine, nor the moon and the stars, nor lightenings, much less this fire. When Brakess shines everything shines after him, by his light all the world is lighted."

He has composed several works in poetry and prose, the latter all commentaries. Fascinating, weird music; lucid, chaste, powerful, balanced expression; universal, unsectarian, fearless, loving exposition;—these are some of the characteristics of his varied literary style. He was a real master of the Philosophy he preached; he can express it in half a verse, or a quarto volume of many hundred pages. He would readily break a lauce with any adversary, atheist, materialist, ritualist, magician, ascetic, Yogi, or Tantric. His writings largely reflect the spirit of the age he lived in; but the magic of the master whose wand can weld all difference into the homogeneous unity of his spell is unmistakable throughout. of his literary activity is his gloss on the Upanishads, the Bhagvad-Gità and the Brahma-sutras, to say nothing of the numerous poems, large and small, which survive on the lip of many a follower of the Vedânta to the present day. The permanent charm of his name lives undoubtedly in the Absolute Philosophy he taught then and for ever to India and the world at large. These, divested of the stirring and the miraculous which inseparably gather round the life of every great spiritual teacher, are the bare facts of the history of the greatest philosopher the world has ever seen.

One thing is clear from the records we have of this great teacher. India was divided into a number of religious sects, the people were torn into a number of castes, and the dry forms of ritualism were crushing all spirit out of the true Ideal of the Veda. This Ideal lay in the Advaita, in the paravidya, the last esoteric initiation spoken of in the Upanishads. The keepers of this Mystery were daily growing jealous of all who, without the necessary training, tried to lift the veil in idle curiosity. Those who caught glimpse of the Truth had not the strength to bear its glare. They interpreted it in the language of physical speech, and mistook the Ideal in the disgusting orgies of the Left-hand-path (vâma-marqa). The Lord of Compassion emerging from the princely home at Kapilavastn, found the Light (Bodhi) in the Ideal which was thus reserved by tradition for the aspirant who had passed through the necessary forms of practical Vedic life and ritual. He proclaimed this openly to the world, without distinction of caste or colour, creed or religion. preached the law of supreme moral purity and love. In the simple yet sublime universality of his teaching there, however was no distinct provision for those forms of life and religion which satisfy the wants of ordinary physical intelligence. "Put no faith in momentary things, look upon everything as not-self, find Niroana in the equality of love and peace "; this was the essence of the Lord's teaching. Herein, obviously, was no place for the ordinary masses, for the traditions of the nation. This Ideal was, of course, the true Ideal of the Veda, concealed in the Upanishads. This is the Ideal perhaps, of all philosophy whatever; but every Ideal carries with it its own success or doom in the nature of those who receive it.

Chaotic India with this high Ideal before the people called thus to look down upon what formed a most necessary training in the mode of life and religion they had lived through the Veda and its tradition, stood the most imminent danger of sinking in hopeless demoralization, stood the most alluring chance of running on the path of ntter denationalization and ruin. The distinction between a fool and a philosopher lies more in the wisdom the latter has learnt in the school of experience, than in the external freedom of life he shares in common with any inmate of the madhouse. The Ideal of 'free living' conduces to peace, and well-being when found as the fruit of a process of regular spiritual development. Proposed at the very threshold of life. it must lead to atheism, immorality, and consummate hypocrisy. Such, indeed, is human nature. Till the spirit attains the exhaltation whence it can take correct measure of things above and below, high ideals get clogged in the materiality of ordinary give and take; empty words take place of the Idea which continually escapes; and mistake in presentation of the Ideal confirms a hundred-fold the very wrong which it was conceived to destroy. This is amply borne out by the fate of Buddhism after the Lord's Nirvâna.

India was thus on the point of having her past wiped out from history, and with her past the permanent service she renders to the world as a perennial stream of spiritual wisdom and philosophy. This is clearly inferrible from the furious wars this Bhahmana-philosopher and reformer waged against the adherents of Bacchanalian Tântric-rites on the one hand, and with the obstinate worshippers of dry Formalism on the other. Even the political outlook was neither cheerful nor cheering. With the Kshatriya prince of Kapilavastu for guide and teacher the whole of war-like India was in a kind of revolt against itself, against the jealous Brahmana and his spiritual prerogative. An internecine war was most imminent. The spirit of revolt having touched religion and society political order was bound to succumb. Considering the religious, social, political situation, the laurels of time are, in my opinion, fully earned by this Brāhmaṇa-reformer for the peaceful revolution he worked through his Philosophy and example.

With the Enlightenment of the nineteenth century about us, we are, almost unconsciously, led into a comparision of those times with these. And the situation is largely suggestive, the points of resemblance strongly inviting, and the mind of the Master worth careful study and Imitation. There is, indeed, sore need of The Imitation of S'ankara all the world over. Let the reader have the picture and its eloquent suggestion before his mind, let him imagine the Master pointing the way to Reform and Peace, and let him seriously construe, in some calm moment, these faltering accents of mine, into the inaudible expression of the Master's mighty melody.

The value of S'ankara's work is not thus historical only. The philosophy he taught and explained is pre-eminently Universal. There is no shade of opinion, no method or discovery of science, no department of experience, which may not find its proper place within the ample folds of the Absolute Philosophy. It is the source of much needed peace and happiness to mankind, it is the law and life of every great action, it is the balm of all evil. One touch of it 'makes the whole world kin.' It puts new life in action, new meaning in words, new vitality in forms, new things in thought. The Absolute Philosophy is the gospel of Nature;— Nature not as understood by dogmatic materialism, but Nature the source and support of all life and all love. It throws a bridge across the wide gulf of country and country, nation and nation, caste and caste, individual and individual. Thus it melts all shadow of separateness into the substance of Unity. Says the Master: "In that Thing, the inner being of all, the billow-less ocean of native bliss and light, what means this nightmare of separateness, creating distinctions of Brāhmaṇa, and Chāṇdāla, and so on." All philosophy has from of old been defined as the search after the one in the many, and if any one has successfully solved the problem of 'one in many,' in its social, religious, political application, it is this one man of his age, S'ankara. Let this universal aspect of his teaching be never absent from the reader's mind.

And in this let spirit address spirit, let not words delude the reader into that false logic which cannot rise beyond the subtleties of physical speech. Consult your conscionsness at every step, and try, as a follower of S'ankara well puts it, to "unify the facts of consciousness "with the teachings of philosophy and the teacher's explana-"tions." Words without the corresponding idea, not in the outer objective world, but in the inner subjective consciousness, lead to that mad Metaphysics which is the ridicale of Positive Science. On the other hand, words always tied to the physical fact, create such artificial limits in the ever unlimited field of knowledge as make Philosophy look down with a speer upon Science and Agnosticism. Truth lies between these extremes. In the compromise between fact and idea is the source of all knowledge, all language; too much attachment to one side only of the equation is the fruitful source of false logic and dogmatic reasoning. The law of correspondence is scientifically, also philologically true. Language is but an expression of Thought, of the Spirit that ever tries to reflect and regain itself through forms of language. Every word, every expression has corresponding ideas on all planes of nature—up to the spiritual. You cannot interpret spirit in terms of matter. It is impossible to interpret some fact even of the intellectual plane in language bound to the physical, except by distant analogies and partial comparisons. And how much more must this be true of the plane of distinction-less, character-less universal spirit.

[•] This word Spirit is used throughout in the strictly philosophical sense of Essence, the being of things; not the realistic essence apart from things, but the abstract Being wherein all beings partake and exist, so to speak.

The only language of describing this Universal, this All without any definite parts or properties, is the language of contradiction. It is and is not, it is everywhere and nowhere, it is everything and nothing, it is being and non-being. The 'Law of Excluded Meddle' cannot grasp It, for It is the law of laws, the logic of logics, the science of sciences. The ultimate fact of the Thing is ever beyond speech, and is best explained, as Yajnavalkya taught an impertinent pupil repeatedly questioning him on the nature of Brahman, by the language of utter Silence. Let the reader be thus put on his guard against the use or rather the misuse of language.

And those who at present or at any time desire a better state of things, social, political, religious, may, thus, well derive a lesson from the way in which S'ankara applied his Philosophy to the problems of his time. Simple as Truth is, it continually escapes because of its simplicity. We realize its glory only when the hand of some master is stretched forth to point to it with authority and vigour. S'ankara showed that in seeking physical unity, in doing away only with the external distinctions of caste and creed, the method of all real practical reform was applied at the wrong end. All reform must proceed from the centre, must work itself out from within. No empire, political, social or moral, can ever stand on mere physical foundation, on brute force, on the outer body alone. The principle of unity which must be sound and substantial to mean strength lies deeper. Sameness of object, identity of purpose might hold men together and carry them beyond the narrow circle of individuality for a time, but that this exhaltation may be permanent, that object and that purpose must be more than skin-deep. Until this is so, efforts at reform and regeneration tend only to compromise and hypocrisy, whatever gilded title they may go under. Physical differences must be sunk in intellectual unity. But even the Intellect is such a treacherous, untrustworthy guide, such a foolish, stupid leader, we are not sure where it will follow in the lead of passions and emotions, and feelings and likes and dislikes. Of Intellect addressing Intellect in the present day there is no end; the results are very meagre, not to say disastrons. Mankind must necessarily soar higher, must find That wherein are drowned the differences of Intellect.

This, says S'ankara, is the Absolute, the Unit, Brahman, Atman, Spirit, Idea. Poets and philosophers, the genius and the man of wisdom, sages and prophets, charm by the power they acquire from glimpses of this Unit, in moments when they soar on the wings of Imagination beyond the physical and the Intellectual. The material degeneration of the Roman Empire, the Intellectual imbecility of the forms of heathen religion, led to a chaos which only the magic of the Spirit who had vision of this Unit could instantly call to order. The success which attends this bond of Christianity is before us in the present day. It was reserved for S'ankara to preserve the coherence of the forms of Vedic worship. They were already worn thread-bare under the Intellectual hammer, and were fast dissolving under a ray of Light from the one Enlightened Unit of the preceding age. He recognised the Truth of the Lord's teaching, even to the extent of earning for himself the opprobrious title of a Buddha under Brahmanic garb. he gave convenient prominence to the difference of intellect and intellect, mind and mind, and made quiet room He added the most necessary for distinction in Unity. supplement to the Ideal of Lord Buddha and effected an easy compromise by showing that all distinctions of sect and belief, class and creed, had each its own place and use in the economy of nature according to the spiritual development it indicated. And yet there was no distinction whatever in the inner thorough unity of all in Brahman. Thus he infused fresh life in and gave resisting power to the dying past of the nation, and once more placed on solid foundation, the most ancient and, at the same time, the most universally refined spiritual civilization the world possesses. If history repeats itself, mankind had, in the present day, better learn from history, than waste its trust on intellectual toys and physical non-sense. Through the Unit beyond mind and body lies the way of victory and peace; in the Unit is the fulfilment of all life and existence; from the Unit is the law of all activity whatever. Individual differences, personal jealousies, all the imps of passion and emotion, that trifle with great responsibilities, wantonly destroy the glorious gems of Futurity, can never confidently be laid at rest till mankind gains and realizes this Ideal of the Absolute Philosophy.

Let us for a moment try to discern the secret of S'ankara. The Light revealed to weak eyes by the Enlightened Lord Buddha tended more to blur than enlighten vision. The esoteric philosophy in jealous possession of the Veda and its keepers was not essentially different from the Light thus proffered; the difference lay only in the presentation. Minds like Gandapada and Vyasa had already found and proclaimed to the world the Absolute Philosophy of the Upanishads, of the Vedanta—the End of the Veda. Epics like the Ramayana and the Maha-Bharata had already pointed out the path of Unity in diversity, of inaction in action. S'ankara only enlarged upon the materials thus available; but the way in which he applied this philosophy to the situation reflects immense, undying glory upon the prophetic vision, universal reason, loving heart, and successful tact of the one mastermind which saved the country from running headlong into political chaos, intellectual ruin and spiritual pordition. He at once perceived that the Absolute Philosophy was wide enough to embrace within its bosom every variety of relative thought and life, every shade of distinction and opinion, without disturbing the one-ness of the All. By thus making room for the objective religion which the people always require, he saved Idealism from that obloquy and contempt which hypocrisy and evil born of wrong application would naturally have heaped upon it, and would thus have driven it away from the country or held it up, as in modern Europe, to the permanent ridicule of the world and its wisdom. For once and only once in the history of Philosophy has Idealism thus been successful in practically solving a very intricate national problem; and herein lies, in my opinion, S'ankara's title to 'the greatest philosopher the world has ever seen.' And in this historical proof of the success of Idealism is the hope of its future. India and the world at large must find salvation and relief from all the ills of the present, in a fresh application of this philosophy to the situation. And this not once but for ever and anon in all time to come. That is the key we have to thank S'ankara for.

The distinction between Philosophy, and Experience which leads to philosophy, is as old as the world, disasters throwing up schorching deserts of sand in the field of thought arise from exclusive application to one or other of the two. Buddha's attempt was of this nature; he severed philosophy from experience, and the fate of Buddhism after the Lord's Nirvâna amply attests the consequence. S'ankara clearly understood this, and laying hold of the esoteric and exoteric Vidyâ spoken of in the Upanishads he effected an easy compromise between Philosophy and Experience, between Reason and Emotion, between Morality and Conduct, between Class and Class, between Society and Salvation. I know there are Orientalists denying this division of esoteric and exoteric knowledge in Vedic philosophy.† The distinction is, however,

^{*} I am persuaded to believe there is no evidence to support the story of S'ankara inciting or ever working towards downright merciless massacre of Buddha's followers. The story bears evident marks of its being an invention of those who may not be in sympathy with the Brakmanio revival under S'ankara. The causes of the decline of Buddhism lie, as I have tried to show, more within than without the Lord's teaching.

[†] Vide Prof. Max Muller's Psychological Religion; also Three Lectures on the Veddata philosophy; etc. Certain writers of the so-called Reform-party in India think the Vedânta was a Protestant schism from the ideal of the Vedân, and that their own new-fangled hobbies being protests of the same kind are, similarly, not beyond the pale of orthodox Hinduism. This involves a false major. There never was a Protest against Hinduism or the Veda save through Buddhism and Jainism. Even Vallabha and Ramanuja never led a schism. The former taught the Absolute Philosophy of S'ankara through Love, making way for devotion in place of gnosis and reflection. The latter materialized the Idea still further by imagining two Ideas in and out of a third, making way thus for pure objective worship and devotion. In either case they were more concessions to the requirements of the age, than protests of any kind.

clearly hinted at in the para- and apara- vidya, in the para- and apara- Brahman of many an Upanishad-text. And but for this distinction the philosophy of S'ankara, perhaps all philosophy whatever, had no ground to Unless experience were a school of wisdom, stand upon. leading to graduation in that which is beyond experience, there were no sense in talking of Philosophy or of the ultimate truth of things. S'ankara emphasised this distinction and showed the value of experience, the use of formal religion and objective worship, the necessity of distinction in unity, the truth of one in many. Without at all tarnishing the glory of the high aspiration of this Philosophy, he re-established in full fresh vigour the ancient ideal in the heart of the nation, pointed out the way to supreme peace while yet in the world, and left to posterity an unfailing source of the most sublime synthesis of philosophy, morals, religion and experience.

Too much of exotericism ends in rigid formalism, in a life savouring too much of the sweet world and its fashion-Exclusive attention to the esoteric tends to the wordy vagueness of metaphisycs or the jugglery of low magic and equally degrading spiritualism. all exoteric forms of life and living, religion and scieuce, are seen and experienced through the esoteric Idea; when, in short, the whole variety of experience (including all the known fields of human activity) is looked upon as so many grades of a course of training leading ultimately to the Idea which is ever going out of and returning into itself at every step and in very being; the reconciliation of exoteric and esoteric is complete in the inexpressible unity of Truth. In this consists the practical value of Absolute Idealism. Twelve years back, I remember to have given a paradoxical sub-title to my small book on the Raja-Yoya; I called it 'Practical Metaphysics of the Vedanta.' Subsequent study has confirmed the conviction which thus expressed itself at the time. In the mode of thought we are considering philosophy cannot sever itself from science, morals from religion, spirit from life, the Idea from the fact, reason from emotion. Education, Art, Politics, Society, Family—none of the interests of humanity—can ever be considered apart from the Idea which they must each and all embody and express, approach and imitate, realize and retain. Lay hold of the Idea and by a process of deduction descend to any particular you desire. This philosophy is the philosophy of Universals. It does not begin with particulars to end again in some confounding particular, it descends from the universal to the particular.

Every atom is thus at once a universe to itself. It finds the particular of its being from the universal it embodies and lives up to. Not an act, not a thought, not a single ruffle of human atmosphere is here present in vain, no chance rules Nature, nothing ever remains in a state of permanent equilibrium, nothing continues ever to move. Equilibrium and motion is the constant law of Recompense which, in a moment, in a single flight of Imagination, in one life or many lives, repairs the apparent wrong of every being, preserves and conserves every energy expended apparently in a fruitless idle manner on any plane whatever. Every being thus realizes the Idea in and through the Fact; in and through life and experience bound up with life. There is no private sanctum or public church where you can weep over your woes or sing your repentence into the ears of some merciful Being. Every atom carries its sanctum and its church within itself, in the Idea which it embodies, in the Fact which it is: - in the realization it has at any moment gained of this its real Self, through the fact it is. The Fact ever drags it away from the Unit, the Idea lifts it to It; this happens daily, hourly, every moment. And according as the God one obeys does he find the meed of his act in the course of time.

'Live in and through the Idea, yield not to the Fact, the external exoteric shell of eternal Thought,' this has been the moral standard of this Philosophy. 'Look upon every being as upon your Self' says an Indian book of children's precepts. The calm equation of peaceful being thus found in busy, active life and its absorbing interests, is but another statement of the law of the conservation of spiritual energy. Work and be not affected with the work or its result; use your-self without feeling the friction of use;—this comes of realizing the Idea. Asceticism is not at all the moral or religious Ideal of this philosophy. It is a philosophy of action, of straight active performance of duty, of pure disinterested honest love. The madness which intoxicates any two individuals with the sweetness of reciprocal presence is the least of that Love which is the very God of this philosophy, so to speak Full vision of the Idea, realization of one-ness with the Idea expressing itself in any and every fact; the universal, transcendent sense of that passive self-gratulating complascence or quiet through which every individual is ever in love with itself; may be described as that Love which is the Gospel of this Philosophy. Forsake not this equanimity of one-ness with the Idea, whatever its form or expression, do your duty as duty is understood on the plane you are acting, and the Eternal Law shall never disturb you in the peace of silent bliss called Liberation or Kaivalya. The Idea is for ever liberated. If the forms of the Idea cease to entice and delnde away from Itself, liberation is at once realized, the Idea at once gains itself, the process of self-realization is complete. 'Fulfil the law of thy nature, take no concern of the result ' has been the burden of Krshna's Revelation to his dear friend and pupil Arjuna. S'ankara and his followers preached their Philosophy to the same end.

Thus it was the strength of this Idea that supported Harischandra who, abandoning a wealthy and prosperous kingdom, sold his wife, child and finally himself for the fulfilment of a promise, made in dream. Thus did Râma tear himself away, without a pang, from his innocent sweetheart, lest through his person may reach some blemish to the ideal of his race and king-dom. Thus did Arjuna fight thousands of his friends and relatives on the field of Kurukshetra in obedience to the call of duty; thus Kṛshṇa, ever busy in a variety of ways, remains an ascetic, the one God of the Indian Nation. Thus did Pratāpa and S'ivāji or heroic women like the queen of Jhansi yet in her teens fight the battles of Hindnism; thus did the Rajaput race carn glory in sacrificing themselves at a moment's call to the cause of their country and religion. Life in India is permeated through and through with the leaven of this Idea. In modern 'civilized' times we look at it from the wrong end, and find everything amiss. Instead of grasping the Deductive Universal and descending from it to particulars, we begin with the Inductive particular and end in confusion, misunderstanding, and abuse.

And the main principle of the Absolute Philosophy is not as absurd or difficult as it is often misunderstood to be. Nor is it philosophy for the few, for the study; the poorest intellect can understand it, the most fashionable drawing-room may be enlivened with it. It requires only the eye to read the Idea, so to speak, into every act, every word, every thought; into every thing, every experience. Not that you learn some new chemistry which will place you in possession of the 'Universal solvent' or bring you a reality of the Alchemist's dream. You only get the eye which opens to a higher Chemistry, a higher Science. The Philosopher's stone and the immortal Elixir are in your possession, for you now realise the immensity of law, the silent wonder of infinite knowledge, the distinctionless unity of life and love.

Every one is perfectly sure of his 'Self' and of the love and duty he owes to his 'Self.' This philosophy only requires that this love and this duty be extended to embrace all 'selves' in one 'Self.' The wildest boor in India understands this, the most fastidious of the country values this, every aged male or female devotes the remaining part of life to contemplation of this. We may try to explain this central idea in a few words. S'ankara bases his Idealism on the undeniable evidence of individual consciousness. The consciousness which is the self of one is the same throughout all selves; what differs is the form, the outer manifestation of inner consciousness. This pure consciousness is called Sat

^{*} Every nameable thing is described as a self in this philosophy.

(Being), Brahman (the All), Atman (Self), Bhuma (the Unconditioned) and so on; in truth, It is the Unnameable, the Inexpressible, the one Residuum after negation of every position. This formless, immaterial consciousness is the one fact of all phenomena, it is, in fact, an abstract, a synthesis, of all being; or, more adequately still, it is only a name to express the sum total of all possible individual units in what we call the limitless kosmos. Every manifestation is a manifestation of this Idea; the world of experience is only the form the Idea takes in going out of itself to return again into itself. This going out of and returning into itself is the very being of the Idea, and the peace of its realization is between this efflux and influx, the daily, hourly law of all existence and activity. 'He who stands firm whatever may come or go' is the real knower of Brahman. The state of this place of peace between action and inaction, between life and death, between being and non-being, is simply indescribable, Find this fulcrum, and you have got the inexpressible. Archemedian lever which can lift the globe of this earth.

The Idea must be realized to be understood, whence it is usually described as self-realizable, and the bliss itself is often called self-realization. Knowing and being, knowledge and belief, go hand in hand, are one in that Unit whose only expression is the speech of Silence. From this nature of the Idea it is evident that all manifestation is so much illusion. It is illusion in that it draws the Selfaway from the Idea which only appears or re-appears as the phenomenon. Thus it is not difficult to understand how every Self has its own world, how it can make or unmake this world. This is matter of daily experience. There are as many worlds within worlds as there are beings in what we know as the World. No effort of language, no stretch of imagination can embrace the whole world under some common description. Every being has its World large or small, rich or poor, pleasant or sorrowful, light or dark, according as it chooses to make it. And the same applies to what passes for Duty, Morality, Honour, Learning, etc., in this imaginary world. One awakened to the Idea sees it all like a ladder on which the Self slowly climbs to self-realization, extending its vision at every turn, gaining itself with every ascent, and approaching the in-expressible silence of seeing itself in every Self as it nears the giddy top. Thus is the world an illusion out and out.

With the Idea running out on lines of manifestation are presupposed the necessary conditions of all manifestation whatever. Time, space, causality is all that is meant by manifestation, the Idea as soon as you conceive it as becoming presupposes these three which do not exist in the Unit. The phenomenal world is an illusion of these three forms, and all that belongs to the phenomenal is therefore subject to the law of Necesity. The cause-less, time-less, space-less Idea beyond Illusion is ever free. It is free to create or destroy its own world, to work its way to self-realization or to wait awhite on any rung of the ladder of experience which leads to self-realization.

And even happiness or bliss is for ever centred in selfrealization. Every being feels happy or otherwise on finding or not finding a reflection of himself. He always desires what is in him, loves what is loveable in him, and feels happy on finding his ideal, his Self, in whatever seems to please him. He is free to enlarge the idea of his 'self' up to the inexpressible universal Idea. All misery, fear, doubt, narrowness are born of his imagination. Realization of the Self within him as one with the Idea is the real aim and object of existence. For until this is done, no peace is found in the forms of Prakrti (illusive matter) which bind the Idea and create that variety of thoughts, feelings, likes and dislikes which ever interferes with the peace and well-being of the world. The highest moral good is Self-realization to which end experience, illusion though it is, provides the necessary training. Empty your 'self' of all contents whatever, run it beyond all possible limits, raise it above all kinds of relation: - thus through experience gain that education which leads to the realization of the Idea. It is there your pulse beats with the pulse of nature, your heart responds to the heart of the Universe, and you find yourself in all and all in yourself. "Then has he access to all worlds, he has gained the empire of Uddålaka tanght:his impertinent son puffed up with the exoteric learning he had acquired, that esoteric truth whereby knowledge of One can lead to knowledge of all. The one Idea being realized as present throughout nature, every being is realized as one's own Self. Action is deprived of its sting of jealousy and hate. The Self then melts, indeed, as a lump of salt in the sea, never again to be regained, as the Brhadûranyaka puts it. The bliss which accompanies the eye that perceives the Idea through every fact and being, every thought and act, is simply indescribable, immeasurable, infinite. If we experience some abrupt yet agreeable tickling of momentary surprise even at ordinary sleight-of-hand magic what deep silence must surround the blissful wonder of that Magic which disillusions you into the indescribable one-ness of the All.

And the means to this realization is reflection and reflection alone. The forms of religion, the physical exercises of Yoga, point to the aspirant yet unable to realize the Ideal, the way to reflection and gnosis. Reflection reveals the Truth at a mere hint, through a casual remark, from a chance expression, by sympathetic awakening from the words of some book or teacher: 'Thou art That.' 'You become what you think,' says Yâjnavalkya. In the pure heart is reflected the spirit of the All, and the Enlightened henceforward forgets even the fact of his having become ^{*} Readers of Philosophic literature will like to be told that what Schopenhauer calls the Will has here been described as the Idea and its synonyms. What he calls Idea is called form, manifestation, Illusion of the Idea. Though the Idealism here expounded agrees largely with Kantean modes of thought, his fiction of a thing-in-itself is here consigned to the oblivion it deserves. Hegel's Absolute Philosophy is not quite out of mind in this presentation of the same phase of thought.

the Light. He acts without concert, without premeditation, without hesitation or doubt. 'He lives the present out with smiling heart, taking no thought of the future or of the past' says Vasishtha to his beloved pupil Râma. In doubt and fear is the death of all philosophy, all high aim, all disinterested morals. Scepticism never yet created one single grain of sand for the innumerable gorgeous edifices it demolished. 'The ignorant and sceptic meet with certain destruction' says Shri Kṛṣhṇa; and in the absence of all intellectual doubt is the test of the last initiation into the sanctum sanctorum of this Philosophy of Brahman.

In a popular work of this kind this brief outline of the principal points of S'ankara's philosophy is sufficient to prepare the reader for due appreciation of what follows. Curions readers will elsewhere find more on the same subject. I have tried to divest the subject of its S'astric garb; and much as some pedants may grudge the liberty thus taken, I for one would consider it a serious misfortune for the Adraita if it had to be dressed up in its peculiar garb to be presentable or distinguishable in the light of present-day thought. It is these pedants who "always at their best while talking of Brahman" as S'ankara puts it, are "without the heart having at all become It," that have brought the Absolute Philosophy into disrepute by encumbering it with words from which the spirit of love and compassion, the spirit of universality and equality, has been parched up in its passage through the scorching desert of their heart. S'ankara preached universal love, active honest work, constant repose in the peace and silence of the Idea.

This philosophy and the manner in which S'ankara applied it to the situation of his time, has been the true saviour of India. It is destined to be the saviour of the world. If the sympathetic reader has gathered enough from this brief introduction to interpret, assimilate and apply the ideas contained in the following pages. I have every confidence he will never part from this collection, he will certainly set apart a quiet morning or evening hour to its grave contemplation every day. It has been so with me, and the immense benefit this reading has done me is my only excuse in thus carnestly inviting my fellow-men to this elevating study.

THE IMITATION OF S'ANKARA.

(Being a collection of numerous texts on the Advaita.)

I.—THE PROLOGUE.

I.

THAT wherein disappears the whole of that which affects the mind, and that which is also the background of all;—to that Self 1 bow,—all eternal consciousness, the witness of all forms of the Intellect.*

III.

I expound in half a verse what has been told in a million volumes;—Brahman is the Truth, the world is illusion, the soul is none other than Brahman.•

Miscellaneous.

IV-VIII.

ACTION leads to incarnation, and incarnation to pleasure and pain. Hence arise all likes and dislikes which again propel to action resulting in religious merit and demerit. These put the ignorant wanderer, again, into the bonds of incarnation;—and so on and on, for ever, rolls the wheel of this world. Nothing but ignorance is the cause of all this; the remedy lies in the destruction of ignorance. Knowledge of Brahman is the way to find final beatitude in the destruction of this ignorance, for knowledge alone, not action which is only a part of ignorance, is competent to accomplish this result. Nor is it possible to do away with likes and dislikes as long as ignorance is not done away with. This is therefore undertaken with the object of destroying ignorance as well as its effect—this world,—and also of explaining the real philosophy of Brahman.†

PROM the senses finding each its own gratification in the objects peculiar to each, there arises no real happiness but only a temporary allaying of the heat of the mind. It is vain, therefore, to grope for any real happiness in the world of objects. The deluded deceive themselves by imagining every dose of evil to be so much good; but in birth, death, and limitedness, the wise never fail to perceive the evil that conceals itself under the inviting form of objects. They find no happiness in things subject to such results. The smallest happiness, in the real sense of the word, is nohow possible in any thing;—oh! I should become that Self which is all bliss, all existence, all enlightenment.

THAT soul which is ever awake even in sleep, sending forth the variety of ideas, is said to be all pure Brahman, all immortality;—all the worlds are held in it (as it were, in suspension), there is nothing which transcends it. It is this. As the one fire pervading the universe appears in so many forms in the variety of objects, so the inner self of all, ever one, appears to take on so many forms, but is ever beyond them. As the sun who enlightens everything has nothing whatever to do with the numerous ills the eye may perceive, so the inner self of all, ever one, has no connection whatever with the joys and sorrows of the world, being ever beyond them. *

AS these rivers flowing to and gaining the ocean lose themselves in it, lose even their name and form, and become included in the name 'ocean,' so do all the sixteen forms of the objective flowing to and gaining the purusha become lost in him, lose even their name and form, and become included in the 'purusha.' This (purusha) is the immortal transcending all forms of the objective. This is thus summed up:—That death may not overpower thee, know the only knowable, the Purusha, in whom are centred all forms like the radii of a chariot-wheel in its navel.*

SAID Yajnavalkya to the Emperor (Janaka):—The same has been explained by the Rk as well: this, indeed, is the eternal glory of him who has realized Brahman. It neither grows nor is diminished by doing or not doing any act, the knower knows this very truth. Knowing this, he is not affected by any Karma whatever, all being as sin to him. The heat of his senses cools down into that calmness of mind which follows on absence of desire, all kind of latent attachment leaves him, no conditions disturb him, ecstatic trance environs him,—who knowing thus sees Self in Self, sees the All as Self. No good or evil touches him, he transcends all good and allevil. The fulfilment or non-fulfilment of any (secular or temporal) act affects him not, he having reduced them all to nothing. He is beyond all form, beyond all desire, beyond all doubt. This is the real Brahmana, this is the real condition of Brahman.

SELF-restraint consists in freedom from latent desire; and Control, in checking the activity of the external senses. That is the height of Non-attachment which turns the mind entirely away from the objective; that is the best of Indifference which patiently puts up with all evils whatever. Faith is full confidence in sacred texts and their interpreters; and constant oneness of aim in the mind's fixing on the eternal sat, is called Pacification (of the mind). Oh my fate! when and how shall I get rid of the bonds of this world—this firm and burning desire may be described as the Desire-for-Liberation.

THE emptying (the mind) of the whole of illusion is the true rechaka (the process of emptying the lungs of the air they contain); the full realization of the idea '1 am Brohman' is the true puraka (the process of filling the lungs with air drawn in from without); and the firm steady sustenance of the mind on this conviction is the true Kumbhaka (the retention of the air inhaled). This is the true Prânâyâma of the enlightened; fools find it only in torturing the nose.*

H 1M death never desires to overpower who wears not on his heart the budge of that necklace which has the vices for pearls held together by the thread of unbroken 'latent desires'. Death overpowers him not whom anger, the fire (radarânala) burning at the bottom of the ocean, this body, and parching up the waters of discrimination, has no power to affect. The oil-mill presses the mixed heap of hard sesamum-seeds into an indiscriminate mass;—death overpowers him not who is not similarly pressed by the bodiless god, Cupid, into a mass, all indiscriminate and confused.

i.—Jivanmukti.

DCI-DCV.

THOUGH ever moving about in the world of experience the whole of it exists not for him ;-all-pervading etherlike consciousness alone subsists. Such a one is called Jivanmukta. The expression of his countenance neither fluses nor fades under pleasure or pain, he stands unmoved whatever may come or go. Such a one is called Jivanmukta. Though acting after every feeling, such as love, hate, fear and the like he who stands unaffected within like the Akáša, is said to be the real Jivanmukta (liberated while yet in this life). He whom the world finds no cause to fear, and who is never afraid of the world, ever beyond joy, and jealousy, and fear, is said to be the real Jivanmukta. With the woes of this world laid entirely at rest, he who, though full of all learning and art is yet without any, who, though with mind is without it, is said to be the real Jivannukta.*

TREMBLING and other signs of fear subside, only by degrees, even after knowledge of the snake as nothing but a harmless piece of rope; the same rope met with in dim light, even after such knowledge, may yet become the same terrible snake it once was. Thus previous Karma comes gradually to end by fruition through experience and not all at once by any obstinate remedy; nay, it is even possible for the immortal one to temporarily feel his mortality in moments of such fruition. This, however, is no flaw in the condition of gnosis once realized, for, Jivanmukti is no observance, it is being at harmony with the course of nature.

[&]quot;Nor does Poona or Bombay contain any Shastree with clearer conclusions on Hindu Theology and Philosophy, better command of lucid language, or ideas more enlightened and profound."—The Daily Telegraph, London (Sir E. Arnold).

[&]quot;You have produced a very learned and useful little work,"—Sir M. William.

[&]quot;Anything that emanates from Prof. Dvivedl's pen is sure of a warm reception at the hands of our readers."—Theosophist.

[&]quot;It is advisable to recommend most strongly the study of Prof. Dvi veli's translation and commentaries."—Lucifer.

- "Undoubtedly a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the subject":--Prof. W. D. Whitney.
- "The result of his labours is all that could have been desired. His full and yet very concise notes show that he has thoroughly mastered the subject, and that he is also able to explain it to others."—Indian Antiquary (Dr. F. Kielhorn).
- "Appears to be a very scholarly edition which is likely to supply a great want."—Dr. B. Rost (India Office).
 - " Find it very good."-Dr. G. Bühler.
- "Himself deeply imbaed with the system, and well-read in cognate literature, as also not unfamiliar with Western Logic, his interpretations are quite welcome. I recommend the young Sanskritist to go through it minutely and repeatedly."—Vienna Oriental Journal (Dr. H. Jacobi).
